How Crayons are Made

By
Linda Zaiser
St. Paul, MN

Crayon companies use wax to make zillions of crayons each day. The wax is heated at high temperatures. When it melts, colored powders called pigments are added. The colorful wax is then poured into little tube molds. When the wax cools, the crayons are wrapped in paper and packed in boxes. Then they are sent to stores. There are more than a hundred crayon colors, but each crayon has one thing in common; they start out being really hot!

The Great Wall of China

By Jing Jiang
Streamwood, IL

What stands in China is the Great Wall built thousands of years ago. It is hand-made, built during the rule of an emperor. It is over 1,500 miles long. The Great Wall's purpose was to keep out enemies and intruders. It would take you at least 24 days to walk from one end to the other. Most of it is located in Beijing.
